PRICE 2 CTS.

MEDICINAL.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, fatigued, or bloated after eating, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, frequent headaches, "floating specks" before eyes, nervous prostration and drowsiness after meals?

If you have any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease the greater the number of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it.

Mrs. MARY MOTT, of Raven Rock, Pleasant Co., W. Va., writes: "Before using your Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, everything I ate would ferment in my stomach, and my tongue was so terribly coated, I thought nothing would remove it. Since taking the Golden Medical Discovery, I can eat a good meal, and enjoy it."

CATARRH
Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostril. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

Mother Roasted in Revenge.
A dispatch from Alfred, Me., says: The frightful crime of the matricide and fire fiend, Leroy Farnald, of East Lebanon, has been explained by that demon himself as having been committed under the influence which a woman exerted over him. He on Monday confessed this much, and told in detail of the burning of his barn and stock, and the killing of his mother with an axe, and the subsequent roasting of her body in the flames of her home. Concerning the motive for his awful crime, Farnald said:

"Oh, I suppose there was a woman at the bottom of it. When a fellow goes chasing after a woman, especially after he gets as old as I am (38), there is no knowing what he will do."

The murderer admitted that his relations with Mrs. Ella Butler, of East Lebanon, the widow whose name was mentioned in the first account of the matricide, were the basis of the trouble. They were engaged to be married a year ago, but the wedding was postponed.

He mentioned the visits of a Miss Goodwin to his home, and his mother's desire that he should marry her. His mother objected to his paying attention to Mrs. Butler, and that was the starting point of the whole trouble.

Setting fire to his barn was his first act of Wednesday's tragedy. He did not then contemplate murdering his mother or setting fire to the house. He had thought for a long time that he would end his unhappiness.

After fully making up his mind to kill himself, Farnald procured a revolver. When he went to his barn Wednesday morning it was with the intention to shoot himself. Then he thought of his animals, of his horse, "Old Jim," and wondered who would take care of them. He decided that they had better all go, too; that he would set fire to the hay, jump into the middle of the flames and shoot himself, thus ending his existence and leaving behind the supposition that his death was accidental.

He applied the match to a bunch of hay that he had raked from the mow into the middle of the barn floor. The revolver was in his hand, half cocked and ready for execution, when the fatal moment came.

But he hesitated, not because he lacked the courage, but because the thought of his mother flashed across his mind. He realized that she would mistrust the cause of his act. Besides, he did not know what kind of care she would receive after he was gone, so he decided that his mother had better go, too.

He went back to the woodshed, got an axe, went into the kitchen, and found his mother in his bedroom, with her back toward the door, making his bed.

One blow with the back of the axe blade crushed his mother's skull, and she fell forward on the bed. Then he covered her with quilts, set fire to the barn and shut the door.

He intended to go back to the burning barn, to jump into the fire, but changed his mind and went into the attic and crawled under the attic floor, from which place he was dragged by the officer five hours later.

It is assumed that the murderer's change of mind relative to going back to the burning barn, was due to the prompt arrival of Daniel Johnson, the nearest neighbor, who saw the smoke and ran to the scene of the fire, and tried in vain to liberate the animals and alarm the members of the family.
